Expenses	Including Grants	Revenue

California boasts iconic plants and animals, some found nowhere else on the planet, but more than 350 of these species and their habitats are threatened because we've significantly altered the state's landscapes. This includes the destruction of 90% of California's riparian forests and ongoing pollution in a vast majority of waterways. The good news is that all Californians, from private landowners to conservation groups to public agencies, can do a lot to restore these damaged places. We make it easier to restore our vital natural resources in a changing climate by partnering with government, NGOs and other restoration proponents to develop regulatory and policy incentives that accelerate the pace and scale of habitat restoration statewide. Our efforts help revive degraded waterways to boost clean water and habitat, and bring struggling species back from the brink.
